One of the most important things to remember before a race is to eat the right foods. Here is my lesson for you. The night before one of my marathons, I was struck by an uncontrollable need for apple butter. I satisfied the hunger that evening but paid a heavy price the next day; the apple butter forced me to make several stops during the marathon. You can bet that I never ate apple butter again before a race. Instead, I concentrate on foods that are part of my normal diet such as pasta and rice: foods that fuel my muscles. You must certainly have similar foods that you eat every day. These foods are the ones you should concentrate on before a race.

24. Generally speaking, _____ is a great virtue in film music, both in duration and in choice of instrument. The musical score should do no more than is necessary to perform its proper function clearly and simply. However, because of some irresistible temptation to dress up scenes with music whether they need it or not, normal films usually end up with too much music rather than not enough. The Hollywood tendency seems to be toward large orchestras, even though smaller combinations can be more powerful in their effect on the film as a whole. The proper amount of music must match the nature of the picture itself. [3점]

25. When you sit down to begin a piece of writing, your first aim ought to be to _____. You just make a note of everything that comes to your mind on the subject. You do not have to worry at all about whether your stuff is connected logically. Just play with your subject and do no fine detail work. I believe many writing difficulties come about because people think writing is a neat and clean endeavor. I don't mean that you have to go out of your way to make your writing disorganized or uncommunicative. I'm just saying that you need to control your worry in the first part of the writing process. Start from making a sketch rather than a finished oil painting.

27. If you walk up and down a pebbly beach, you will notice that the pebbles are not arranged at random. The smaller pebbles usually tend to be found in a separate zone running along the length of the beach. The larger ones are collected in a different zone. The pebbles have been sorted, arranged, and selected. We might explain that the arranging was really done by the blind forces of physics, in this case the action of waves. The waves have no purposes or intentions. They just randomly throw the pebbles around, and big pebbles and small pebbles respond differently to this treatment, so they end up at different levels of the beach. _____ has come out of disorder.

As a result of this kind of information, a scientist conducted a research to discover the chemical makeup of tears. He found that the tears caused by sadness contained more total protein than those caused by cutting a raw onion. 39. It's natural to believe that external events upset you. When you're mad at someone, you automatically make them the cause of all your bad feelings. You say, "You're annoying me!" When you think like this, you're actually fooling yourself because other people really cannot make you angry. Some pushy teenagers might crowd in front of you in line at the movie theater. Your boyfriend might always show up late for dates in spite of knowing how important promptness is to you. No matter how unfair others might appear to you, they do not, never did, and never will upset you. The bitter truth is that you're the one who's creating every last ounce of the anger you experience.

40. Say you're thinking of writing a complaint letter. Your first impulse may be to start it by spinning out your sad story, event by event. But what's your real goal here? If you're like most people, you want the wrong made right. Perhaps you even want an apology. That's where your letter should start: asking for what you want. After all, this is what you most need to communicate, and this is what the reader of your letter first wants to know! If you were in his or her place, would you really want to blindly start reading a list of sad events? You'd want to first know why this person was writing to you; then perhaps you'd be ready for the details.

You would be surprised at how many people fail to understand the importance of this step. A couple of months ago, a woman offered me her ticket as she was leaving; the ticket still had one hour remaining. What a bonus: I didn't have to look for some spare coins. On the next visit, I noticed that the parking fairy had left a ticket with about 45 minutes remaining in the slot of the machine for some lucky person to use. The parking fairy has inspired me to do the same whenever I can. It's a lovely feeling knowing that you could be brightening up someone's day with such a small gesture.

At the same depth underwater, however, your veins would collapse and your lungs would shrink to the size of a soda can.

Our living space on the Earth is very limited in that we have to give up the vast underwater world as a land-based species. It's not simply that we can't breathe in water, but that we couldn't bear the pressures. (①) Because water is about 1,300 times heavier than air, pressure rises swiftly as you descend. (②) On land, if you rose to the top of a five-hundred-foot height, the change in pressure would be slight. (③) Amazingly, people do voluntarily dive to such depths, without breathing equipment, for the fun of it in a sport known as free diving. (④) For them, the experience of having their internal organs rudely deformed is thought exciting. (⑤) To reach such depths, however, divers must be dragged down by weights.

When our ancestors began farming and herding, they gave up the advantages of mobility. It's true that domesticating sheep, cattle, or pigs does not bind you as tightly to one place as planting grain does. But it certainly becomes more costly to flee an enemy, who can steal your stores of food. So the beginning of agriculture meant that our ancestors would band together in larger groups than they had previously been used to. Hunter-gatherer families could easily split up once food got scarce or rivalries and tensions grew too difficult to manage, but early farmers knew that splitting up had become a far more dangerous thing to do. It became more than ever essential to learn to live with others and to manage conflict rather than to escape it.

The human brain is not particularly sensitive to the absolute magnitude of stimulation, but it is extraordinarily sensitive to the differences. For example, if you are blindfolded and asked to hold a wooden block in your hand, would you be able to tell if a pack of gum is placed on top of the block? The right answer is “It depends,” and what it depends on is the weight of the block. If the block weighed only 30 grams, then you’d immediately notice the 500 percent increase in weight when a 150-gram pack of gum is added. But if the block weighed 5 kilograms, then you’d never notice the 0.03 percent increase in weight. There is no answer to the question “Can people detect 150 grams?” because brains do not detect grams but they detect _____. And the same is true for just about every physical property of an object. Our sensitivity to the relative is not limited to physical properties such as weight, brightness, or volume. It extends to subjective properties, such as value, goodness, and worth as well.

Marilyn Tina was working as a manager overseeing the operations of 320 stores. One day a friend told her FLY, one of the biggest multinational corporations, was planning to open its own stores and CEO Jennifer Lawrence was interested in hiring her to oversee the project. Because Marilyn thought that working for FLY would be a great opportunity, (a) she did some research prior to her meeting.

(B)

Then (b) she flew back to California wondering if she had done the right thing. She felt that she had probably lost any chance of getting a job there, but she also felt good about having told the truth. Two weeks later, Jennifer called and told her (c) she had reconsidered what Marilyn had said and agreed with her assessment of the situation. She offered Marilyn the job as vice president of clothing and accessories.

(C)

Marilyn’s dilemma was that her desire to work for FLY was in conflict with her professional judgment about the products. (d) She was afraid that if she told Jennifer what she discovered, she wouldn’t get the job. When she met with Jennifer, she hesitated at first, but finally told Jennifer that she thought the stores would fail because the products would not reflect what FLY stood for.

(D)

As she did her research, (e) she found out that FLY’s products had been far behind consumer’s demand for FLY brand. FLY had simply bought stock goods and just put its own label on them. The company bought clothing from different manufacturers without any consistent standards in size, quality, or color. It didn’t reflect the brand of FLY.
