This has an opening, in which a problem or a conflict is revealed and background information is supplied. This has an action plan, in which the lead characters deal with the problem and try to find a solution. As the characters try to solve the problem, they run into complications which only make the problem worse. This has a climax where the conflict reaches its peak. Finally, in the resolution, the characters either solve or fail to solve the problem.

A poem will live or die depending on how it is read. There are a few pointers about the oral recitation of poetry. ① Read the poem once slowly aloud without writing or marking anything. ② Listen closely when the presenter reads the poem. ③ Don't stop until you finish the poem, even if you don't know the meaning or pronunciation of a word. ④ When you have finished, reflect for a moment on any words, images, and characters that caught your attention. ⑤ Write down these items in your notebook, and read the poem again silently.

24. As a beginning lawyer, I was assigned to assist an older man, a business attorney. He hated _____ . When I would bring him what I thought was a finished piece of work, he would read it quietly and take out his pen. As I watched over his shoulder, he would cross out whole lines, turn clauses into phrases, and turn phrases into single words. One day at lunch, I asked him how he did it. He shrugged and said, "It's not hard—just omit the surplus words."

25. One of the forces that drive evolution is among species, in the course of which one species gains temporary advantage through an evolutionary innovation, only to be overtaken by a counter-innovation. The outcome is the development of apparently better ways of doing things, such as running faster, or being smarter, while no permanent advantage is secured. In military terms, this process is known as an 'arms race': Weapons may become more numerous or effective on both sides, but neither side ultimately benefits.

26. Experienced animal trainers take a stool with them when they step into a cage with a lion. Why a stool? It tames a lion better than anything. When the trainer holds the stool with the legs extended toward the lion's face, the animal tries to focus on all four legs at once, and that paralyzes him. Divided focus always works against you. Ernest Hemingway notes, "We cannot travel every path. Success must be won along one line. We must make our business the one life purpose to which every other must be secondary." Therefore, to be successful, you must

When you touch a pencil with all five fingertips with your eyes closed, why do you perceive a single pencil image instead of five unconnected pieces of the pencil? The answer is that your brain has special circuits that help you build complete pictures from individual pieces of information.

(A) , these gap-filling circuits lead your brain to perceive what it expects to see, instead of what it actually sees. When these expectations accurately reflect the objective world around you, your perceptions will be on target. Sometimes, (B) , what your brain expects to see is far from an accurate representation of reality.

I have a small machine shop. For a long time business was really slow. We once went weeks without any new orders. It was difficult for us especially since some of the other shops in our area were really busy. But then one day we got a small order. Then the following week we got another. Business started to pick up. We started to get orders every week. Recently I got an offer to do a really big job, and I took it without considering how much work it would be. But I wish I hadn't accepted it because now we have too much to do.

It was very disturbing reading your article about how the farmers plan to handle the wild pig overpopulation on the Channel Islands. Humans always seem to think that the best way to deal with any type of animal problem is to just kill them. Isn't there another alternative than shooting these pigs? Humans brought pigs over to these islands many years ago. Now that they have overpopulated, people want to murder them. Where were all of the humans when the pigs started to multiply out of control?

32. Certain discoveries in genetics, in brain surgery, and in many other areas can be misused causing great damage to humanity. This is unavoidable as long as industrial and military organizations are free to make use of new theoretical discoveries. These organizations must not be allowed to determine the application of scientific research. This will require a control board, whose permission would be necessary for the practical application of any new theoretical discovery. Needless to say, such a control board must be legally and psychologically independent of industry, the government, and the military.

- ① separation of the military from industrial profit
- ② benefits of brain surgery and genetic engineering
- ③ current scientific advances in brain surgery and genetics
- ④ need for regulating the application of scientific research
- ⑤ role of psychological testing in industry and the military

33. Employers may not accept the idea of telecommuting. They may feel a loss of control over employees who work at home. Besides, employers often believe that the best work gets done when people work with other people. Face-to-face meetings are not possible with telecommuters. Meetings on the phone are not the same. The subtle message of body language gets lost in phone conversations. It is also not possible to solve problems that need immediate attention. The biggest problem, in fact, may be trust. Can an employer trust the employee to do his or her work without a manager watching?

- ① alternatives to telecommuting
- ② importance of body language
- ③ shortcomings of telecommuting
- ④ convenience of phone meetings
- ⑤ building trust by telecommuting

34. Since a basic vocabulary of 2,000 words, the core vocabulary, plays such an important role in English, some people have suggested that acquiring it will allow you to understand 80 or 90 percent of everything that you hear or read in English. In fact, things are more complicated than that. What actually happens is that with a vocabulary of 2,000 words, you can understand everything you see or hear a lot of the time, but other times you won't understand anything at all. It depends on what kind of situation you are dealing with. The core vocabulary will allow you to deal with a large number of ordinary everyday situations, but once you leave these predictable situations, you will find it hard to get by with only a restricted vocabulary.

- ① necessity of basic English
- ② reduction of core vocabulary
- ③ origins of English vocabulary
- ④ limitations of core vocabulary
- ⑤ value of predictable situations

37. wolf spider에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것은?

Wolf spiders are a group of ground-dwelling hunting spiders. There are more than 2,000 types of wolf spiders. Their sizes range from 2 mm to 40 mm. Some wolf spiders can even walk on the surface of a pond. They use their front legs to catch their prey, and then they bite and crush the prey. Some even build a trapdoor which they hide under, then when their prey comes on the trapdoor, they jump out at it. When the spider is pregnant, she attaches the egg sac to herself, then she tears the egg sac open. The babies crawl onto the mother and stay there for about one week.

39. We have all experienced events that might be considered extraordinary. Perhaps you were cleaning out a closet and found a gift from someone you hadn't spoken with in years; then an hour later, unexpectedly that person rings you on the phone. Can such moments be attributed to mere coincidence? Of course they can, but on closer examination they can also prove to be glimpses of the miraculous. Each time we have an experience like this, we can choose to think nothing of it, or we can recognize it for the potentially life-changing event it may prove to be. I have been fascinated by the role that coincidence plays in guiding and shaping our lives.

40. It is natural that people will always want to have holidays. And holiday areas will always want to have tourists around. Consequently, this has resulted in a rapid rise in tourism over the last thirty years. More and more people are taking holidays. Most people are now better off than in the past and have more money available for holidays. People also have more leisure time and the length of their annual holidays has increased. In addition, places have become more accessible as transportation improvements have made travel faster, easier, and cheaper.

41. The great innovation in the development of costume in Europe after the mid-fourteenth century was the abandonment of the long flowing costume common to both sexes. Costume then became short for men and long for women and buttoned or laced. This development led to the disappearance from everyday wear of an ancient form inherited over several thousand years. It also represented a first step towards modern costume. Around 1350, this change began to spread throughout Europe.

When Alexandre-Gustave Eiffel designed his famous free-standing 986-foot iron tower in Paris in the late 19th century, he did so without modern science or engineering. Mathematicians, though, have long suspected that an elegant logic lies behind the monument's graceful shape.

- (A) Initially frustrated, Weidman's eureka moment came when he found a long-overlooked memo written by Eiffel in 1885.
- (B) The document gave Weidman the insights he needed to work out the mathematical formula that describes the tower.
- (C) That conviction led engineer Patrick Weidman to search for the mathematical formula behind the tower's curve.

On Saturday evenings my friends and I would go to the market. We walked through the busy streets packed with drunken men and bargaining women amid the dancing and chanting of street-singers. We would laugh and cheer as magicians performed their tricks. Even at these moments, my love's name sprang to my lips in strange prayers which I myself did not understand. My eyes were often full of tears. I could not tell why, and I did not know whether I would ever speak to her or not. If I spoke to her, how could I tell her about my feelings of admiration? As night fell, my body was like a harp, and her words and gestures were like fingers running upon the wires.

However, being socially responsible does not mean that a company must abandon its primary economic mission.

Corporate social responsibility means that a corporation should be held accountable for any of its actions that affect people. (①) It implies that negative business impacts on people and society should be corrected if at all possible. (②) It may require a company to give up some profits if its social impacts are seriously harmful to some of the corporation's investors. (③) This also doesn't suggest that socially responsible firms cannot be as profitable as other less socially responsible firms. (④) Social responsibility requires companies to balance the benefits to be gained against the costs of achieving those benefits. (⑤)

Sometimes parents are surprised to realize that teenagers don't seem to understand the connection between hard work and success. Certainly the images of success as depicted in the media rarely show the years of struggle and practice that musicians, actors, or athletes engage in before their instant successes. Impressionable teens may well see the final product and imagine that success really can happen overnight. Often they don't know the long story of struggle and persistence behind the success.

[46~48] 신문 사설 내용에 대한 두 사람의 대립된 의견을 읽고, 다음 물음에 답하십시오.

Person (A) - I am writing about yesterday's editorial opposing a new middle school in our small town. I am really upset that your newspaper opposes this project. When was the last time this town spent a significant amount of money on education? If we want our children to be competitive, then we need to give them the opportunity to receive a better education. I strongly believe that 20 billion won is a reasonable price for a school equipped with modern facilities and updated computers. In this way, our well-qualified and well-paid teachers will be able to teach more effectively. As the parent of a child who will be entering middle school, I have a strong personal interest in this project. I really hope that my 12-year-old son will have better opportunities to receive a quality education.

Person (B) - Thank you for your fair and well-written editorial about the proposed middle school project. At 20 billion won, the cost is way too high for a small town. I strongly oppose those who think that we need such an expensive new school. My two children attended the middle school and I really think that they received an excellent education. They didn't have computers for every classroom, but at least they had dedicated and caring teachers. If more money were spent on teachers, we would see improvements in the quality of education. By offering higher salaries, we can attract more highly qualified new teachers. We can purchase new supplies and textbooks and have more money for field trips. In conclusion, _____.

(A)

I will never forget the feeling I had when Dad said to his friend, "I'd love to go to the restaurant with you, but tonight is a special time with my daughter." I could tell this man was disappointed, but amazingly to me, he seemed to understand. Dad and I did everything we had planned on that trip. I don't think any young girl ever loved her father as much as I loved mine that night.

(B)

When I was 11 years old, Dad promised to take me with him on a business trip to San Francisco. I was so excited! We were going to be there for two days, and we planned everything. Dad was going to be busy in meetings the first day, so I would hang around the hotel. After his meetings, we planned to have our favorite Chinese food. Then we'd take a ride on a tourist bus, and go back to our hotel room for a video and chocolate ice cream. I was dying with anticipation.

The day finally arrived. The hours dragged by as I waited at the hotel. Six o'clock came, but Dad didn't. Finally, at 6:30, he arrived with another man, an influential businessman. I remember how my heart sank as this man asked if we would like to go to a seafood restaurant with him. Oh no! I thought. I hate fish and I'll just sit there while Dad and his friend talk. I could see all my hopes and plans I had with my dad being ruined.
